NATIONAL CONFERENCE ON

Tech-Health: Demystify and accept Artificial Intelligence

(An Interdisciplinary approach to achieve unimaginable)

ABOUT CONFERENCE:

The concept is driven by asking questions why AI is still a challenge for Healthcare professionals. Artificial Intelligence (AI) is developing at a rapid pace and finding new applications across the health service team. Some professionals have voiced concerns over the implementation of AI, whilst others predict greater job opportunities in the future.

The use of AI within healthcare can be traced back to the early 1980s, when it was primarily used as decision support systems and expert systems that aimed to mimic the judgment of health care team. Since then, AI has come a long way, boosting productivity and enhancing patient care by creating predictive models, chatbots, assistive robotics, and other forms of technological innovation. AI has revolutionized the healthcare profession, allowing them access to quicker, more accurate data sets that can help predict patient outcomes, provide a deeper understanding of illnesses, and better-informed diagnoses of diseases. The possibilities seem endless as we continue to advance in AI, and there is no doubt that it will continue to shape the future of healthcare practice in more ways than we can imagine.

However, this field of science faces various ethical and legal challenges. Despite tremendous strides made in the field of AI in communities, and its role in improving the treatment process, it is not accessible to all societies. Many low-income and developing countries still do not have access to the latest technologies. It should be noted that the ethical dilemmas, privacy and data protection, informed consent, social gaps, medical consultation, empathy, and sympathy are various challenges that we face in using AI.

Clinical practice will be directly affected and further information is required regarding the integration of AI in practice. By enhancing technological proficiency, increasing AI understanding, and providing practical experiences, healthcare faculty can better prepare future professionals to effectively navigate the AI-driven healthcare environment and contribute to improved patient care outcomes.

To meet the new demands for nursing care, Symbiosis College of nursing has taken initiatives to integrate artificial intelligence into healthcare setting through simulation for better quality education.
